

Hello Church,

Answering the Call: An Inside Look at Pastor Training School

In a world where many seek purpose and direction, the Pastor Training School serves as a beacon for those sensing the call to ministry. On Tuesday, August 5 at Longview Point, a group of men gathered from 6:00 pm until 8:30 pm to take a step further on their spiritual journey. Led by Trey Clenney, a church planter from Gospel Life Church, these men are part of a unique initiative directed by Jay Parks, whose vision is to equip men who sense a divine calling with the training they need to fulfill their ministry potential.

The Pastor Training School is a nurturing ground for those who have heard the whispers of a calling to ministry. Whether they are confident in their path or wrestling with uncertainty, this school provides a forum for exploration and growth. Men from various walks of life, representing different backgrounds and vocational experiences, come together with a shared goal: to deepen their connection with the Lord Jesus Christ and understand His purposes for their lives.

The current group is beginning their journey with a six-week focus on Evangelism, to help in building a solid foundation in understanding and sharing the Gospel. Under the leadership of Trey Clenney, students are engaging in transformative discussions and activities designed to strengthen their ministry capabilities. Next, the program will transition into the topic of revitalization, to be able to equip students with the tools necessary to breathe new life into their congregations and communities.

One of the distinctive features of the Pastor Training School is its flexible entry point. Recognizing that each individual's journey is unique, the program allows men to join at any time. There isn't a rigid start or end; rather, the emphasis is on the personal journey and the point in time when individuals choose to embrace their calling.

Director Jay Parks encapsulates this philosophy with his inclusive vision. By allowing men to start their training whenever they feel ready, the school accommodates the personal nature of calling, ensuring that no one feels left behind or out of place. Wherever an individual begins in the program is indeed the start of their personal journey toward ministry.

At the heart of the Pastor Training School is the deep-seated belief that God is at work in the lives of these men. As participants engage with the curriculum, they are encouraged to discern and clarify their calling, seeking assurance and validation of God's work in their lives. This approach nurtures a supportive environment where men can grow confidently in their faith and leadership skills.

The Pastor Training School is more than just education; it's a journey of faith and discovery. Through supportive teaching, fellowship, and practical ministry experience, this program empowers men to step boldly into their callings, armed with the tools and conviction needed to serve their communities and reflect the love of Christ.

As these men continue their paths, one cannot help but feel inspired by their dedication and commitment. In a world yearning for genuine leadership and compassion, the Pastor Training School is helping to shape future leaders who will stand as pillars of faith, hope, and love in their communities.

So, if you are sensing the call of God on your life in vocational ministry, or you just would like to strengthen your Bible knowledge or study habits and would love to have a comradery with fellow believers, call Bro Jay Parks and start the Pastor Training School. He can be reached at (662) 607-2422.
